Dear Mr. Wassersug:

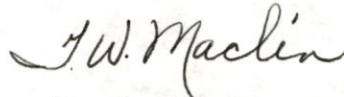

From 1980 until January 1984, the Photo and Electronics Products Department, DuPont Connector Systems (formerly Berg Electronics) operated a hazardous waste drum storage at a leased warehouse located at 165 Lamont Street, New Cumberland, PA 17070. This drum storage facility was officially closed with the PA. Dept of Environmental Resources in January 1984. The warehousing and distribution functions were moved in February 1986, and the Lamont Street facility is no longer leased by DuPont. The present owner of the location is Gene Maffey representing Transue Associates who purchased the facility from Fred Getty on September 15, 1982.

Attached is the DER approved closure plan for the drum storage site which includes maps, dimensions, volumes and types of waste as well as details on the closure. Although no known leaks or spills occurred during the units operation, soil samples were taken from around the storage pad upon closure and clean-up. Results of the analysis of these soil samples can be found in the closure plan.

The closure plan was submitted to the DER April 8, 1983, and approved by Abdul R. Merchant, DER's Harrisburg Regional Office on June 22, 1983. The site passed a post closure inspection on September 4, 1984, conducted by Greg Harder from Harrisburg's DER office.
